

Speaking Evaluations Explained

In-Class Speaking Evaluations

Why

Korean teachers might have parent meetings soon and would like to have feedback from native teachers to show to the parents. NETs see students for 1/3 of their time in elementary, but parents rarely get feedback from us, so this is a great way to provide some. The evaluation will also be considered for their level-up score for the next semester.

When

Please refer to the current term schedule for suggested dates – Please communicate with you KT team leader about when they will be done at your campus.

Evaluations have been scheduled for the same week as online essay. This allows for more flexibility with the evaluations and allows students to work on their essays if evaluations are finished quickly. I recommend teaching the online essay in the first class to allow for this.

How

They will be done as in-class speeches. This is similar but not the same as the speech contest. They can be much shorter and about simple topics if needed. This is campus dependent. Your team leader will decide with the elementary leader at your campus on how they will be done.

Prepared - The students will be given topic in the first class of the week and then prepare their speech for homework. Students will then present in the second class of the week.

Unprepared - The students will be given a topic and a short amount of time to prepare in the class. They will then present in the same class. This is normally only suitable for high level students.

Expectations

Remember to set clear expectations on how the speeches should be prepared. Again, this will vary by campus / level / KT. How long should students present for? How well prepared should they be? What structure should the speech follow?

Class Flow

- Explain the evaluation form.
- For smaller classes, do some presentation skills activities (check the speech contest folder for examples).
- Have students present at the front of class.
- If you finish early, do more speaking-based games or allow students to work on their online essay.

Notes

- If you are worried about timings for bigger classes, explain or even start the speaking evaluations at the end of the online essay class.
- I normally start to grade and write comments while the student is presenting. Then, while waiting for the next student, I complete the grades and comments. For larger classes, I may just make some additional notes and finish the comments later to ensure I can complete the evaluations for all students in one class.
- Some teachers find it easier to complete the evaluation forms on their computer.

Speaking Evaluations Explained

- If doing prepared speeches, a homework handout template is available in the folder noted below (In-Class Speaking Evaluation Homework Sheet).
- Please try and ensure all evaluations are done in one class. If one or two students need to do it in the next lesson, it can quickly be done at the end of class or during the break time.

Topics and Evaluation Forms

The grading form and example topics can both be found on Dropbox. Topics may be set by your team leader or freely chosen by you. Your team leader will let you know.
